Faculty members are the heart of Emory University. Everything we accomplish—from field-defining research to an educational experience like no other—is powered by our professors.

President Gregory L. Fenves has established the $25 million Faculty Eminence Initiative through the Presidential Initiatives Fund to incentivize new professorship endowments.

As we look to the future, we must invest in scholars who embody ambition and heart, Emory’s distinctive aspiration to transform the world by serving others.

HOW IT WORKS
The Faculty Eminence Initiative unlocks matched funding, on a 2:1 basis, when a donor commits at least $1 million to establish an endowed professorship for attracting and retaining rising stars or $2 million to establish an endowed distinguished professorship for recruiting and rewarding top scholars.

Matched funds are available for new faculty endowments across Emory’s schools and colleges. Gifts must be committed through a gift agreement and paid over no more than five years. The maximum match amount is $1 million for a gift of $2 million per newly established endowment.
THE POWER OF OUR PARTNERSHIP

Faculty strength will define Emory’s next chapter. Attracting leading scholars and cultivating the talent we have will advance our national reputation, grow our global research imprint, and boost our capacity to educate top students, poised to transform the world to come.

“Emory has an expansive vision of our responsibility to humanity. Endowed professorships fuel discovery, incubate new ideas, and cultivate leaders of the future.”

Gregory L. Fenves
President, Emory University
